AMSTERS ARE HEARD IN ENSEMBLE WORK

Ysaie, Godowsky, and Gerardy Play with Sincerity and in Perfect Accord.

ENJOYED BY LARGE AUDIENCE

Ysaie, Godowsky, Gerardy, these were the names whose magic drew a large audience to the New National Theater yesterday afternoon. Each of these great artists was heard once in all, but by far the best part of the performance was the ensemble work in the two trios for piano, violin, and cello, Beethoven's B-flat and F of Saint-Saens.

When three big soloists sink their own individuality, forego the opportunity for display technical display, and unite in the interpretation of concerted chamber music it is indeed an event. There is something of lofty graciousness about such a performance.

The ensemble work was as beautiful as any that will be heard in Washington this winter. The three artists were in perfect accord. Each played with sincerity and painstaking workmanship as well as with the number, a demonstration of the greater proportions of the works.

There are parts of the Saint-Saens' trio that entitle it to appear in the noble company of the Beethoven's B-flat and F. The andante is especially rich in beautiful themes, and the scherzo is rhythmically charming, and a delightfully colloquial bit of writing for the three instruments.

Following the Beethoven trio, Mr. Jean Gerardy played "Variations Symphoniques" by L. Beethoven, a composition that brought out the latest possibilities of the cello. Mr. Gerardy's cello is an exceptionally good instrument, and his tones are flawless. He did some brilliant execution work in an encore, "Am Spring" by David.

Mr. Leopold Godowsky was shown for two Mendelssohn songs without words and Brahms' variations on a Paganini theme. He played, instead, the G minor of Chopin, and Liszt's "Gnomes." His playing of the "Gnomes" was beautiful throughout, not marked by any of the sentimentalism which is so often the case with this piece.

His playing of the "Gnomes" was beautiful throughout, not marked by any of the sentimentalism which is so often the case with this piece. The story tells how Old Pipes, who had become so feeble the cattle could not hear his piping when he tried to call them home, one day learned the villagers had hired two children to do his work.

In the midst of his distress, Old Pipes heard a Dryad in her tree knocking to be released, because it was spring. He released her, and they not only saved him a wish, but kissed him, and since a Dryad's kiss makes a mortal ten years younger, Old Pipes was able to do his work.

The Echo Dwarf, who lived on the opposite hill, and who did not like the work he had to do when Old Pipes was strong, tried to take revenge upon the Dryad by putting her back in her tree. But Old Pipes captured the Dwarf and imprisoned him instead. Before the story ended, the Dryad had kissed both Old Pipes and his old mother again, making them both younger and vigorous.

FINAL TRIBUTE PAID TO FATHER MCGEE

Cardinal Gibbons and Bishop Corrigan Officiate at Funeral Services of Pastor.

BURIAL IS IN MOUNT OLIVET

Cardinal Gibbons was one of the prominent churchmen who conducted funeral services yesterday morning at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart for Rev. Joseph P. McGee, late pastor of the church. Admission was by card, and the church was filled. Interment was in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

The requiem mass was started at 10 o'clock and was completed at 11:20 o'clock. Cardinal Gibbons was assisted by Rev. Edmund Fay, of Catholic University. The celebrant of the mass was Bishop Corrigan, vicar general of the archdiocese of Baltimore, and he was assisted by Rev. Paul Griffith, pastor of St. Augustine's Church, acting as deacon, and Rev. Joseph White, of Hickory, Md., as subdeacon.

The church was draped in crepe, and Rev. P. J. O'Connell, of St. Vincent de Paul's Church, blessed the coffin. Floral offerings were numerous. Rev. William Carroll, of St. Patrick's, and Rev. George Harrington, of Baltimore, Md., were the masters of ceremonies.

The pallbearers were B. F. Saul, N. H. Shea, P. J. Lee, William McGee, H. Woodward, E. Schwartz, Patrick Moran, and Gen. Michael Corrigan. The sermon was preached by Mr. Mackin, of St. Paul's Church, who paid the following tribute to Father McGee:

"Well did he serve in diffusing among his flock the mysterious influence that emanates from the altar of God into the hearts and souls of men. In a few years he accomplished the work of an ordinary lifetime."

"God, in removing him from his charge, takes occasion to show His children that no man is necessary to His cause. The standard-bearer may falter or fall, but the cohort moves on to victory. The ardent dream of your pastor, toward which he labored so unceasingly, for a great National Shrine of the Sacred Heart, must be accomplished by other hands than his. Your duty is to pray to God that He may send you a worthy successor to the man who is gone; and that you, his congregation, may be as loyal to the successor as you were to him in his strong hope. May his memory remain to be an inspiration to you."

WILL DINE WITH PRESIDENT.

Scholars on Foreign Relations Committee Asked to Write History.

President Wilson has invited the members of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate to the White House to dine next Monday night.

No invitation was given as to what would be discussed. There are a number of treaties pending and others about ready to be submitted to the Senate, and the Mexican and Japanese situations are sufficiently important to be the subjects of such a conference.

It was the opinion of the Senate yesterday that the President desired probably to talk over with the members of the committee the diplomatic situation generally, as it will be up for consideration at the present session.

Washington's Newest and Safest Hotel

"Welcome" moved in with the foundation, smiles were mixed in the concrete, and conscience set every standard.

The building is occupied entirely by Hotel Powhatan. No other enterprise can share the premises. The Hotel Lobby is our guests' resting place, and it opens on one of the beautiful little parks for which Washington is famous.

The soft, beaming light of an old mansion is simulated from cut glass indirect lights that seem a very part of the ceiling, as a pearl earring nestles in the ringlets of its fairer owner. And this elegantly simple effect is attained throughout the Hotel Powhatan by keeping in mind a beautiful private home. Every room radiates cleanliness, freshness, restfulness, and every ray of light, every breath of air seems happy to say:

"This Is Homelike; Just Rest."

Our hotel is conducted absolutely for your comfort. Truly this is the place where welcome lives.

Restaurant a la carte of superior excellence. Music during Luncheon, Dinner, and after the Theater.

Music! Real Music!! Not the kind that annoys, but the kind that soothes. You should hear the pipe organ with full orchestra and an occasional song.
